

Trauma Surgeon

St. John's Mercy Medical Center, part of the Sisters of Mercy Health System in St. Louis, Missouri, has an excellent practice opportunity for a trauma surgeon to join a four surgeon hospital based practice group. The successful candidate should be board certified or eligible in General Surgery with added Trauma/Critical Fellowship preferred. Responsibilities include 80% surgical care of trauma patients, elective general surgery and supervision of surgical residents.

St. John's is designated a Level I Trauma Center, seeing 65,000 emergency visits per year and admitting over 1,700 trauma patients annually. It is a 900 bed, community, not for profit, teaching center. Excellent subspecialty support is available, including orthopedic surgery, a dedicated burn unit, a heart center, cancer center, stroke center, maternity services, rehabilitation services, outpatient surgery center, and psychiatry/chemical dependency services.

St. John's Mercy is located in suburban St. Louis, Missouri, near excellent public and private schools and beautiful residential areas, with easy access to all the cultural and recreational assets of the region.
